RECEPTION OF THE INDIANS AT BOSTON.

The visit of the delegations of Sacs and Foxes, Sioux and Ioways to Boston, will be a remarkable incident in their history. It is a most gratifying circumstance, and one that demands the cordial and respectful acknowledgments of the proper authorities of the General Government, that from the momen of their arrival in that city to that of their departure from it, they were the objects of the care and attention of the city and the State. The Mayor met them at the depot of the railroad, and during the whole time they were in the city, he exerted his personal and official influence to secure them from intrusion that might have been unpleasant to them.—His Excellency Governor Everett, manifested great solicitude to promote the same objects. To both these gentlemen, the thanks, not only of the General Government, but of the country, are due, for the measures they adopted to accomplish the great purposes of the visit of the delegations, which were to give them correct ideas of the power of the United States, and at the same time impress them with a conviction of the friendly disposition of their white brethren towards them. To the inhabitants of Boston, and the towns around it, the first appearance among them of red men from the banks of the Mississippi and Missouri must have been full of interest. We give place to-day to an account, which we find in the Boston Advocate, of the proceedings on Monday last, at the State House, and on the Common. That of their reception by the Mayor in Faneuil Hall shall appear hereafter. The copy of the paper containing it, has been unfortunately mislaid.—Globe.

From the Boston Advocate of October 31.

The ceremony of receiving the Indian Chiefs in the Council Hall of the State, took place yesterday in a very imposing and proper manner. The almost entire population of the city were in motion, and assembled in dense masses on the Common and around the State House. No public spectacle in the history of the city ever assembled such a multitude; and yet our orderly population acted as their own police officers, and preserved a decorum without parallel in the progress of the Indians through the United States.

In the morning from ten to twelve, the Chiefs held a levee for the ladies exclusively in Faneuil Hall. It was crowded in every part, floor and gallery, by our fair citizens, who did not behave as civil as the men.

At 2 o'clock the Chiefs arrived in the Representatives Hall, having been escorted by the Lancers.—The galleries of the hall were filled with ladies, the seats below by members of the Legislature, etc. reserving the settees in the area for the guests. It was impossible to have admitted more without preventing the ceremonies.

THE TALK WITH THE CHIEFS IN THE STATE HOUSE.

The Chiefs being seated in the area of the hall, Governor Everett, from the Speaker's chair, addressed the audience. He informed them that our guests were a deputation from the united tribes of Sacs and Foxes, who had visited Washington to conclude a treaty with the Government, explanatory of the great treaty of 1836, relating to the boundaries of lands. The seat of the tribes is between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, at the head waters of the river Des Moines, in the territory of Wisconsin, running down to the north line of Missouri.—The number of the tribes is 6,000, and they count 1,400 braves capable of bearing arms. Their language belongs, in common, to the tribe of Massachusetts and others that once occupied the place where we are. The other band of Indians are the Ioways and Missouri Sacs and Foxes west of the Mississippi, and a deputation of the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians, who roam without any fixed habitation.—These last left the city to-day, on their return to their hunting grounds.

Our friends who are present of the Mississippi Sacs and Foxes, consist of the principal chief, Keokuck, and four chiefs united with him, two of the Sac and two of the Fox tribes. They are the chiefs of villages. Several of the chiefs and warriors are attended with their wives, (five in number,) and there are five children; one of them, a boy ten years of age, named Musanwont, is the son of the principal Chief, Keokuck. Their language is extremely limited, and in addressing them through an interpreter, it is necessary to appeal to objects of the senses rather than the understanding. To convey to them an abstract idea requires a tedious process of explanation by comparisons with sensible objects.—The audience would thus be aware that in the addresses to them and their replies, there would be much simplicity; and, if any thing occurred that might excite pleasantry, it was desirable to avoid any expression, lest it should seem to our guests, whose distinguishing national characteristic is gravity, to border on the ridiculous. For himself he should take as little time as possible, in order that it might be left for our guests.

The Governor then proceeded to address the Chiefs in the following manner, which was interpreted to them by sentences, the Chiefs, at each sentence, uttering an emphatic ugh!

"Chiefs and Warriors of the united Sac and Fox tribes, you are welcome to our Hall of Council.—You have come a far way from your homes in the West to visit your white brethren. We are glad to take you by the hand.

"We have heard before of the Sacs and Foxes—our travellers have told us the names of their great men and chiefs: we are glad to see them with our own eyes. [A very emphatic ugh! The savage as well as the sage, is pleased with a little neat flattery.]

"We are called the Massachusetts. It is the name of the red men that once lived here. In former times, the red man's wigwam stood on these fields, and his council fires were kindled on this spot.

"When our fathers came over the great waters, they were a small band. The red man stood on the rock by the sea side, and looked at them. He might have pushed them into the water and drowned them; but he took hold of their hands and said, Welcome, white man! Our fathers were hungry, and the red man gave them corn and venison. Our fathers were cold, and the red man spread his blanket over them and made them warm.

"We are now grown great and powerful, but we remember the kindness of the red man to our fathers.

"Brothers! our faces are pale and yours red, but our hearts are alike. The Great Spirit has made his children of different complexions, but he loves them all.

"Brothers! you dwell between the Mississippi and the Missouri—they are mighty streams. They have great arms—one stretches out to the east and the other away west to the Rocky Mountains. But they make one river, and they run together into the sea.

"Brothers! we dwell in the East and you live in the far West, but we are one family—of many branches, but one head.

"Brothers! as you passed through the Hall below, you stopped to look at the image of our great father, Washington. It is a cold stone, and can not speak to you. But our great father, Washington, loved his red children, and bade us love them also. He is dead, but his words have made a great print in our hearts, like the step of a strong buffalo on the clay in the prairies.

"My Brother, (addressing Keokuck) I perceive by your side your young child sitting in the council hall with you. May the Great Spirit preserve the life of your son. May he grow up by your side like the tender sapling by the side of the mighty oak. May you long flourish both together, and when the mighty oak is fallen in the forest, may the young tree take its place, and spread out its branches over the tribe.

"Brothers! I make you a short talk, and bid you welcome once more to our council hall."

Keokuck, the principal chief, arose, and first shaking hands with the Governor and others near him, commenced speaking with earnest emphasis, and much graceful gesticulation, holding his staff, which he frequently shifted from hand to hand.—The grave and dignified countenance of Keokuck is deeply impressive, and the expansion of his broad chest gives him the appearance of great muscular power. The interpreter, as far as we could understand him, gave the following version. Much of its aptness and imagery is undoubtedly lost to us by an imperfect version:

"Keokuck and his Chiefs are very much gratified that they have had the pleasure of shaking hands with the head man or Governor of this great State, and also with all the men that surround him.

"You well say, brother, that the Great Spirit has made both of us, though your color is white and mine is red; but he made your heart and mine the same. The only difference I find is, he made you speak one language, and I another. He made the same heaven (or sky) above our heads for both. He gave us hands to take each other by, and eyes to see each other. I wish to take all present by the band, to shake hands with all my white brethren.

"I am very happy to say before I die that I have been in the great house where my fathers and your fathers used to speak together as we now do. And I hope the Great Spirit is pleased with this sight, and will long continue to keep friendship between the white and red men. I hope that now, in this presence, he sees us; and hears our hearts profess friendship to each other; and that he will aid us in what we are now engaged in.

"My remarks are short, and this is what I have to say to you. I take my friends all by the hand and wish the Great Spirit to give them all a blessing."

Wapella, a principal chief of the Fox nation, apparently next in rank to Keokuck, arose and shook hands.

"I am very happy (he said) to meet my friends in the land of my forefathers. When a boy, I recollect my grandfather told me of this place where the white man used to take our fathers by the hand. I am very happy that this island has induced so many white men to come on it; by that I think they got a living on it, and I am pleased they can content themselves to stay on it. [Great applause.] I am always glad to give the white man my hand, and call him brother. The white man is the eldest of the two, but perhaps, you may have heard that my tribe is respected by all others, and is the oldest among the tribes. I have shaken hands with a great many tribes of different people. I am very much gratified that I have lived to come and talk with the white man in this house, where my fathers talked, which I have heard of so many years ago. I will go home and tell all I have seen, and it shall never be forgotten by my children."

Powesheek, a principal Chief of the Foxes said—

"A remark has passed between you and my chief concerning our forefathers. I have been wishing to see the place where my forefathers took the white man by the hand, and my children shall not forget it. I shall never forget it. My friends and Chiefs are all pleased at this visit. May the Great Spirit bless you, and may we all live as brethren, as our fathers did when your fathers first landed on this shore."

Apponose, a Sac Chief of a village, made the most animated speech in manner and matter that was delivered by the Chiefs. He said—

"You have heard just now what my Chief has to say. All our Chiefs and Warriors are very much gratified at their visit to this town. Last Saturday they were invited to a great house, (Faneuil Hall,) and now they are in the great Council Hall. They are very much pleased with so much attention.—This we can not reward you for now, but shall not forget it, and hope the Great Spirit will reward you for it. This is the place which our forefathers once inhabited. I have often heard my father and grandfather say they lived near the sea coast where the white man first came. I am glad to hear all this from you. I suppose it is put in a book where you learn all these things. As far as I can understand the language of the white people, it appears to me that the Americans have attained a very high stand among the white people. It is the same with us, though I say it myself. Where I live, beyond the Mississippi, I am respected by all people, and they consider me the tallest among them. I am happy that two great men meet and shake hands with each other." [Shaking the Governor's hand. Great applause.]

The head Chief and principal Chiefs of villages having spoken and shaken hands, the principal war Chiefs followed in that ceremony, they being distinct in their rank and office from the other Chiefs.

Buffaloe (the head War Chief,) said: I am much pleased with the conversations I have heard with our Chiefs, and glad you took notice of the boy, (Keokuck's son.) He will also be a Chief like his father. The Chiefs who have spoken to you are Chiefs of villages. As for my part, I have nothing to do with the villages. I fight for the villages, and I fight for the women and children. (Applause.)

Appanoseokema, a War Chief of an exceeding muscular and athletic frame, said: "I am very happy to shake hands with you. I shake hands with you with all my heart. I am too happy to come to the village where the white and red man first met. My Chiefs and friends sitting round here are very glad at this scene. Although we have no paper to put your words down, we don't forget a good talk, good council, or good advice, when we meet friends. For my part, I rank among the braves. These are my arms. They are all my defence; but I wish to leave them in this house, that the white man may recollect they were put here by the red man who came far from the West. My present may not be agreeable to you. It is ugly, but it is given with a good heart."

He then disrobed himself of his head dress, necklace, wampum belt, moccasins, and arms, leaving only his blanket and leggins, and laid them on the table.

Black Hawk next came forward. His appearance was quite a dash to all our romantic associations with his name. He appeared old and squalid, with a dirty handkerchief round his head, a soiled shirt, and, altogether, he was the least imposing of any of them. He spoke through a different interpreter, who rendered him very awkwardly.

He said he liked to hear them talk of the Great Spirit. When we first met the white men, we thought they were French. They were our brothers. You are our brothers. Your heart is white, and mine is white also. Now they are giving our Chiefs medals. So did the French, and hung them on our necks when they first came here. I think the Great Spirit is listening to the conversation between us. The conversation has pleased me very much. I have lived a long time between the Missouri and Mississippi. I like to hear you talk of them. I have got old now, but I am a man, and so are you. I can not shake hands with you all. In shaking hands with you, I wish to shake hands with all the women and men I see here.

Keokuck presented his son to the Governor, and said: He is young, but he has a good heart, and I hope will never forget what has passed here.

A War Chief presented a pipe. This, he said, is one of our principal ornaments. I give it in token of amity.

A young and animated War Chief presented a highly decorated war club.

"I am very happy," he said, "to see my Chiefs have a little conversation with you. I am a part white myself. My grandfather was a Frenchman, but I followed the counsel and advice of my Chief. I am afraid of my Chief. My father is an old man. He put me under the Chief. You see how I have followed his advice. I am a Brave. My father has often told me of this place, where the white men first came. It was not so old a story then. I am glad to meet you here in that place, and hear you. I am young, and will follow the advice of my Chief, and will tell my young warriors to do so. I leave this war club for my friendship."

All the Chiefs having spoken who desired to do so, the Governor then said to them:

"We have listened to your speeches with the greatest pleasure, and thank you for the gifts you have laid on our council table. We are only one of the council fires of the nation, and we have no right to present our red brethren with medals; that must be done by our Great Father at Washington. I shall now have the pleasure of offering them some of the white man's arms in exchange for theirs. Also, some few articles of dress for the women and children. They are of little value in themselves; but I hope they will receive them as a token of friendship and good will."

The Governor and Chiefs then repaired to the balcony, where presents were made to the great delight of the Indians. Keokuck had a splendid sword and brace of pistols; his little son, a pretty little rifle. The principal Chiefs were presented with long swords, and the others with short ones. Black Hawk had a sword and pistols; shawls, calico, and trinkets were given to the women. During this ceremony, a mass of at least fifteen acres of people stood below, filling the streets and Common. The Chiefs were escorted to the Common by the Cadets, and began their war dance. The crowd very patiently kept outside the lines, leaving a space of many acres, in the centre of which were the Indians. Their war exercises were not very striking. One beat a drum, to which they hummed monotonously, and jumped about grotesquely. This lasted half an hour, and they then moved off in carriages to their lodgings. The whole affair was extremely well managed. The military were in fine order, and the multitude patient and exceedingly well behaved, except the genteel ladies, who are always the worst mobocrats and most selfish entities in a crowd. The Governor deported himself in a highly becoming and unostentatious manner; the service done by the Lancers in preserving the lines was deserving general thanks, and on the whole, as many of the public were gratified as could be possibly anticipated on such an occasion. Many were squeezed, but nobody hurt. Some coughs and colds will be caught by sitting on the ground, though the day was very mild for the season; but we shall all have it to say we have seen the Indians.

We close this narrative with the judicious remarks of the editor of the Advocate:

We have taken pains to give the speeches of the Indian Chiefs with verbal accuracy, as a matter of high intellectual curiosity. History, romance and poetry, have embodied the Indian character to our perceptions from childhood. It is pleasant, therefore, to see the original, and find how accurate the picture has been. The language, ideas, and style of these Indians, are precisely such as have been ascribed to their race. There is much to admire in the simple and manly manner in which they convey their ideas. He must be a churl who does not associate with their visit here objects of philanthrophy and protection to their race.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

THE MECHANIC ABOVE HIS BUSINESS.

"I have often heard," said uncle Benjamin, "that puss in gloves catches no mise." And this has been very much in my mind lately, when I observe how great is the ambition of our young sparks to be thought gentlemen.

Surely, father, said Sammy, you have no objection to a man's dressing himself decently.—"Not at all, Sammy; a man may be decent, tidy, and elegant as you please; but all in its proper place. I often hear people asking why Sunderland, which is one of our villages, thrives so little; and I always answer, because the master-workmen are never in in their shirt-sleeves.—You may see them at their shop doors, in Sunday trim, before they have got their third apprentice." Then, father, you would have a man always in his apron. "Not at all, Sammy, I say again. When I was a lad, we made ourselves smart every evening; on Saturday nights we took a little foretaste of Sunday; and when Sunday came, every man was rigged out in his best; and a very pretty sight it was, I assure ye, to see an old-time beau; his hair in powder, prettily clubbed—plated stock buckle—ditto for knees and shoes—small clothes and white stockings—and posy in the bosom. But then we earned it fairly by hard knocks. In working hours there was no play; and no man was ashamed to labor. But now-a-days, there is a great rage for being over-genteel. I often spy a rich waistcoat and gold chain under a butcher's frock, and see young mechanics twiddling their rattans in the streets, when they ought to have their coats off." But you may allow that a man may do a good stroke of work, with a clean shirt and decent vest. "Very good; perhaps he may in some sorts of business. Let every man be as neat as his work will allow, but a collier will have a black face; and he is a poor carpenter who makes no chips. But I am thinking of more than mere dress.

"Too many of our working men are ashamed of that which is their honor, namely, their trade. When they appear in Broadway they wear gloves, and ape the coxcombs who never do any thing." Father, father, said Sammy, I am afraid you would have mechanics reduced to an inferior caste, who must never rise, but forever look up to the richer folks as the lords of creation. "There you mistake me greatly, Sammy. I am an old mechanic—many a long year I wrought at a laborious employment; I am for giving every man a chance to rise; I honor an industrious working man. I think nothing more honorable than honest labor, and because I think so, I don't like to see a man ashamed of it. Let me tell you a story.

"About a year ago, I was returning in the stage-coach from Philadelphia, where I had been to see your uncle Isaac. Next to me sat a young man who did not recognize me, but whom I at once knew to be a shoemaker in Second-street. He took his seat with an air, and looked the gentleman. Every thing was fine; had gloves; spectacles; watch in a little pocket almost under his arm; under clothes with a perpendicular aperture; white sole-straps, gold headed switch. I perceived that his plan was to 'sink the shop.' Poor fellow, I wished to teach him a lesson, because I had known his father: so I gave him line for awhile, and sat mum, while he talked largely of what the Philadelphians consider the property of each and every citizen, Fair Mount, Laurel Hill, Girard College, the new gas-lights, the big Ship. Not a word about trade, but much of 'councils,' election, politics, Mr. Ingersoll, and the theatre. As the company was very complaisant, he grew more easy, and at length usurped most of the conversation. At a good pause I ventured to put in my oar, and asked 'can you tell me, sir, how Spanish hides have been selling?' He looked at me hard, and said; 'Not exactly, sir;' and hastened to talk of something else. 'Pray,' said I, 'do you know whether this business of importing Paris shoes has turned out well for the ——'s in Walnut-street?' He colored a little, pulled up the angles of his collar, and said, 'not being in that line, sir, you must excuse me for not knowing.' He was uneasy, but not quite convinced that he was found out, and went on talking quite largely about the shipping business. I thought I could come a little nearer home by another inquiry, so I said gaily, 'Allow me to ask you whether good old Mr. Smack sticks to the last? I remember the day when he could finish his pair of boots with any man in Jersey.'

This was wormwood; for he knew in his heart that Mr. Smack was his own father; yet as he was not even yet quite sure that I was apprized of the connection, he replied with some confidence, though with a red face, 'Mr. Smack? ah yes, the old man; he has not been in active business for several years.' I should perhaps have been content with going thus far, had not young Mr. Smack launched out in a strain, more affected than ever, of very absurd discourse about play-house matters. As it was, inasmuch as I never was ashamed of being a mechanic myself, I knew no reason why he should be; so at the earliest rest in the conversation, I said, 'Mr. Smack, I am pleased to see that you keep up the old business: a very pretty stand that of yours in Second-street; and if you please customers as well as your good old father did, I can engage for your success." This speech settled my man. He turned several colors; the passengers enchanged looks and smiled; and at the next watering place, Mr. Smack went outside, and made the rest of the journey on the box." I cant help thinking, said Sammy, that this was a little ill-natured in you, father. The thing is this. We live in a land of liberty and equality. We are looked down upon as laborers, and twitted as mechanics, 'snobs,' and so on. It is very natural, therefore, that a man should try to escape these sneers, and put the best foot foremost. "But hold, Sammy, I agree it is natural, and right, to escape from contempt; but take the right way to effect it. What is the right way? Certainly not by being above one's business, or trying to 'sink the shop.'—For this is saying that you are yourself ashamed of your calling; whereas you ought to be proud of it. Why conceal a thing unless you think it a disgrace. Can you expect other men to respect that which you despise yourself? There is no surer way of bringing honest industry into contempt, than by using low shifts to avoid the appearance of labor. If you wish the public to respect your vocation, show that you respect it yourself."

Such was the advice of this veteran mechanic to his son; and I verily believe there is sound wisdom in it. It is very common to find the very same persons complaining that they are looked down upon, who encourage the contempt by seeming ashamed of that which is their honor. After some years of careful observation, I have never seen a mechanic above his business, who did not meet with mortification where he sought respect; and I have never seen a working man, however humble his sphere, who lost any consideration in society, by frankly appearing in his real character, and laying his own hand to the task whenever it become needful. The working men of America constitute a powerful and increasing class, and should do nothing to betray a doubt as to their own respectability.

CHARLES QUILL.

DANIEL WEBSTER UPON A NEW HORSE.

Halloo, General Harrison, Francis Granger, and all ye minor availables! Clear the course! Gen. Duncan is out, horse, foot and dragoons, for the Presidency, with the Godlike upon his shoulders, and Billy May for servant boy. Fair warning! If you interrupt him, all is lost. Otherwise, death and extermination to Tom Benton and his humbugs? At a late meeting, in Mercer county, in this State, the following nominations were made.

For President,
GENERAL JOSEPH DUNCAN.
For Vice President,
HONORABLE DANIEL WEBSTER.

And the following resolution passed:

Resolved, That, having made a nomination more capable of supplanting the present dynasty, and retrieving the once exalted character of our country, than any other ever offered to the American people, we will scrupulously adhere to it, succumbing to no availables, and yielding to no contingencies.

Bravo! We admire the Mercer boys, not only for their spunk but for their foresight!! They will unite the very extremes of whiggery, whilst they get the means, (conservatives,) through the servant boy.—For, whilst one was fighting gallantly at Fort Sandusky, the other, in Congress, was denying him appropriations to defray his expenses from day to day.

Chicago Democrat.

The Detroit Morning Post states that Gov. Mason has effected a loan of $5,000,000, for the purpose of effecting the improvements projected by the state government of Michigan.

Early Winter.—At Cincinnati, on the 26th ult., there was a slight fall of snow, and at Columbus, Ohio, it fell to the depth of two inches.

Mrs. Madison, relict of the late ex-President, is now in Washington, where she intends to reside during the ensuing winter.

Singular Fire.—A load of hay containing two tons, from Wenham, on its way to Boston, took fire, and wagon and all, with the exception of three of the wheels, was consumed. The accident was occasioned by friction on the axletree, which burnt till it broke off and let the load down upon the fire.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at Springfield, Illinois, on the 1st day of January, 1838, for the Judicial Circuit at the Internal Improvement Office in Belleville, Illinois, on Thursday the second day of February next, until the hour of 4 o'clock P. M. of that day, for the grading, bridging and masonry of about 12 miles of the Alton and Mount Carmel Railroad, extending from the city of Alton, to Edwardsville, in the county of Madison, and from the latter place to the south end point of those will embrace plans showing the situation of all bridges and culverts, with the dimensions, and the manner of the same. Bridges and culverts, Wood sleeps, Bridges and Culverts, and a considerable amount of heavy embankment in the valley of Cahokia.

Plans and Profiles of the line, and drawings of the different structures to be built, together with specifications of the manner of executing the work, will be exhibited at the Engineer or Internal Improvement Office, in Belleville, on and after the 15th day of January, 1838, and all other information as to the work to be done will be afforded on application at the above office.

Contractors will be required to make an affidavit to the effect that they have not given or agreed to give any person or persons of their respective bids within 60 days after the letting, and to have their bids completed, before the execution of the agreement of the Railway, so as before the first day of November, 1838.

Responsible bidders will be expected, in all cases in which the contractors are not personally known to the Engineer, to refer to the American Commissioner interested.

For the information of contractors already, I may be well to state, that the line of road, passes from the north end Bonfield-ing City of Alton, to Edwardsville, the county seat of Madison county, through a thin well fertile section of country, and that the grading, embankment and culverting forms, and embankment as per-ceeds together with the excavation, on the deepest cuts, and depressions.

PROPOSALS

WILL also be received at the same time and place for the Bridges, and the masonry of the embankments over the Big Muddy River, and on the north creek on the line of the first section, and for the masonry of the bridges over the Big Muddy River, not having been let on the 5th section, as heretofore advertised, in consequence of the insufficiency of the bids received at that time.

The work on the Railroads to be let will be divided, and the size of a large number of embankment, and extensive bridging, chiefly over the river bottom lands, the Cahokia creek, and Wood creek also consists of heavy embankments, culvert bridge, &c.

The work will be required to be commenced on or before the day of September following, and to be completed as to before the first day of September, 1838.

Proposals for any of the above work may be directed to the undersigned, endorsed "Proposals for Work in Section No. 1 (or 2, 3, &c.) January, 1838," and will be received at any time previous to 4 o'clock P. M. on the day of letting, and will be duly considered, but if not by mail must be post paid.

PROSPECTUS OF

THE UNITED STATES MAGAZINE

AND DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

ON the first of October, 1837, will be published at Washington, District of Columbia, and delivered simultaneously in the principal cities of the United States, a new Monthly Magazine, under the above title, devoted to the principles of the Democratic party.

It has long been apparent to many of the reflecting members of the Democratic party of the United States, that a periodical for the advocacy and diffusion of their political principles, similar to those in such active and influential operation in England, is a desideratum, which it was very important to supply—a periodical which should unite with the attractions of a sound and vigorous literature, a political character capable of giving efficient support to the doctrines and measures of that party, now maintained by a large majority of the people. Discussing the great questions of polity before the country, expounding and advocating the Democratic doctrine through the most able pens that that party can furnish, in articles of greater length, more condensed force, more elaborate research, and more elevated tone than is possible for the newspaper press, a Magazine of this character becomes an instrument of inappreciable value for the enlightenment and formation of public opinion, and for the support of the principles which it advocates. By these means, by thus explaining and defending the measures of the great Democratic party, and by always furnishing to the public a clear and powerful commentary upon those complex questions of policy and party which so frequently distract the country, and upon which, imperfectly understood as they often are by friends, and misrepresented and distorted as they never fail to be by political opponents, it is of the utmost importance that the public should be fully and rightfully informed, it is hoped that the periodical in question may be made to exert a beneficial, rational, and lasting influence on the public mind.

Other considerations, which cannot be too highly appreciated, will render the establishment and success of the proposed Magazine of very great importance.

In the mighty struggle of antagonist principles which is now going on in society, the Democratic party of the United States stands committed to the world as the depository and exemplar of those cardinal doctrines of political faith with which the cause of the People in every age and country is identified. Chiefly from the want of a convenient means of concentrating the intellectual energies of its disciples, this party has hitherto been almost wholly unrepresented in the republic of letters, while the views and policy of its opposing creeds are daily advocated by the ablest and most commanding efforts of genius and learning.

In the United States Magazine the attempt will be made to remove this reproach.

The present is the time peculiarly appropriate for the commencement of such an undertaking. The Democratic body of the Union, after a conflict which tested to the uttermost its stability and its principles, have succeeded in retaining possession of the executive administration of the country. In the consequent comparative repose from political strife, the period is auspicious for organizing and calling to its aid a new and powerful ally of this character, interfering with none and co-operating with all.

Co-ordinate with this main design of the United States Magazine, no care nor cost will be spared to render it, in a literary point of view, honorable to the country, and fit to cope in vigor of rivalry with its European competitors. Viewing the English language as the noble heritage and common birthright of all who speak the tongue of Milton and Shakspeare, it will be the uniform object of its conductors to present only the finest productions in the various branches of literature, that can be procured; and to diffuse the benefit of correct models of taste and worthy execution.

In this department the exclusiveness of party, which is inseparable from the political department of such a work, will have no place. Here we all stand on a neutral ground of equality and reciprocity, where those universal principles of taste to which we are all alike subject will alone be recognised as the common law. Our political principles cannot be compromised, but our common literature it will be our common pride to cherish and extend, with a liberality of feeling unbiassed by partial or minor views.

As the United States Magazine is founded on the broadest basis which the means and influence of the Democratic party in the United States can present, it is intended to render it in every respect a thoroughly NATIONAL WORK, not merely designed for ephemeral interest and attraction, but to continue of permanent historical value. With this view a considerable portion of each number will be appropriated to the following subjects, in addition to the general features referred to above:

A general summary of Political and of Domestic Intelligence, digested in the order of the States, comprising all the authentic important facts of the preceding month.

General Literary Intelligence, Domestic and Foreign.

General Scientific Intelligence, including Agricultural Improvements, a notice of all new Patents, &c.

A condensed account of all new works of Internal Improvement throughout the Union, preceded by a general view of all now in operation or in progress.

Military and Naval News, Promotions, Changes, Movements, &c.

Foreign Intelligence.

Biographical obituary notices of distinguished persons.

After the close of each session of Congress, an extra or an enlarged number will be published, containing a general review and history of its proceedings, a condensed abstract of important official documents, and the acts of the session.

Advantage will also be taken of the means concentrated in this establishment from all quarters of the Union, to collect and digest such extensive statistical observations on all the most important interests of the country as cannot fail to prove of very great value.

This portion of the work will be separately paged so as to admit of binding by itself, and will be furnished with a copious index, so that the United States Magazine will also constitute a COMPLETE ANNUAL REGISTER, on a scale unattempted before, and of very great importance to all classes, not only as affording a current and combined view, from month to month, of the subjects which it will comprise, but also for record and reference through future years; the value of which will increase with the duration of the work.

Although in its political character the United States Magazine addresses its claims to support particularly to the Democratic party, it is hoped that its other features referred to above—independently of the desirable object of becoming acquainted with the doctrines of an opponent thus advocated—will recommend it to a liberal and candid support from all parties, and from the large class of no party.

To promote the popular objects in view, and relying upon the united support of the Democratic party as well as from others, the price of subscription is fixed at the low rate of five dollars per annum; while in mechanical arrangements, and in size, quantity of &c.matter, the United States Magazine will be placed on a par at least with the leading monthlies of England. The whole will form three large octavo volumes each year.

The subscription will be in all cases payable in advance, or (for the first year only) six dollars on the delivery of the third number. The absolute necessity of this rule in such an establishment will be obvious to all.

In return for a remittance of $50, eleven copies will be sent; for $100, twenty three copies. The certificate of a postmaster of the remittance of a sum of money will be a sufficient receipt, all dangers of the mail being at the risk of the publishers.

All communications will be addressed, post paid, to the undersigned, the publishers.

LANGTREE & O'SULLIVAN,
Washington, D. C. April, 1837.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE

CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE AND APPENDIX.

SENSIBLE of the deep interest which must be felt throughout the Union in the proceedings of a new Congress, convoked by the new administration, to meet the extraordinary emergencies which have arisen since the close of Gen. JACKSON'S term of service, the undersigned have already made preparations to furnish their annual report in the form of a CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE. As these successive publications comprise a full and faithful record of all that is done in Congress—sketches of the attendant discussions, with an APPENDIX containing the finished speeches prepared by the members themselves—they are suited not only to gratify the curiosity of the hour, to inform the distant constituency of the part performed by their immediate representatives, and of the result of the labors of all; but, we doubt not, they will be found permanently useful as the most authentic, complete, and convenient parliamentary record of our times. This undertaking having, with these views, been liberally patronized by the public, it is our purpose to justify this early and continued favor, by increasing the strength of our corps of Reporters at the next fall and winter Sessions. The Fall Session will be looked to by the country to settle all that has been unsettled by the overthrow of the system of Deposites as established by Congress—the overthrow of the currency as established by the Constitution—and the overthrow of the system of revenue, both as a means of adequate supply for present demands, the maintenance of manufactures, and the regulation of commerce. Every thing of pecuniary interest to the Government and the nation will be involved in the discussions of the next Congress; and it was because the President would not have those all-important subjects left to Executive discretion a moment beyond the time when a full Congress could be summoned, that the September session was convoked. The machinery of government, even when thrown out of geer, must continue to work; but when so disordered, its movement may be driven in a wrong direction. The Representatives of the people are alone competent to set all to rights. No Democratic Chief Magistrate would continue, in the condition of things at present existing, to substitute Executive expedients for clearly defined law springing from the public will.

TERMS.

For the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE, during the first two sessions of the 25th Congress - - - - - $2 00

For the APPENDIX to the Congressional Globe, during the first two sessions of the 25th Congress - $2 00

Any person sending us the money for five copies of either of the above publications, will be entitled to a copy.

Payments may be transmitted by mail, postage paid, at our risk. The notes of any incorporated Bank in the United States, which did not suspend specie payments before the 1st of May, 1837, will be received. But when subscribers can procure the notes of Banks in the Northern and Middle States, they will please send them.

To insure all the numbers, the money must be here by the first Monday in September next.

The CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE will be sent to those papers that copy this Prospectus, if our attention shal' be directed to it by a mark with a pen. Our exchange list is so large that we would not observe it, probably, unless this be done.

☞No attention will be paid to any order, unless the money accompany it, or unless some responsible person, known to us to be so, shall agree to pay it before the session expires.

T. White's Toothache Drops.

THE only specific ever offered to the public from which a permanent and radical cure may be obtained of that disagreeable pain, the Tooth-ache, with all its attendant evils; such as fracturing the Jaw in extracting the Teeth, which often proves more painful than the Tooth-ache itself, and cold passing from the decayed Teeth to the Jaw, thence to the head, producing a rheumatic affection, with many other unpleasant effects, such as a disagreeable breath, &c.; all of which are produced from foul or decayed Teeth.

I am happy to have it in my power to offer to the world a remedy that will not only remove the pain nine times out of ten, if properly applied, but preserve the teeth from further decay, and arrest the disease in such as are decaying and have not commenced aching, restoring them to health and usefulness.

ERIE, PA., Oct. 17, 1832.—The subscribers having witnessed the pleasing effects of Dr. Thomas White's Vegetable Tooth-ache Drops, feel a pleasure in recommending it to those that are afflicted with the tooth ache, as a safe and in most cases perfectly efficient remedy for the disorder.

VEGETABLE RHEUMATIC DROPS.

MANY articles are before the public, as a cure for that most obstinate and tormenting disease, the Rheumatism; and from close observation we are led to believe, that they have, to a very great extent, failed to produce that desirable result: and may it not be attribute to the fact, that articles said to cure this troublesome disorder, are also recommended to cure almost every disease with which our frail bodies are attacked; and in their preparation that object is kept in view, viz: to have the medicine a cure for all diseases.

The Vegetable Rheumatic Drops are offered to the public as a remedy for Rheumatism, and as no case is known where a perfect cure was not effected, we are justified in declaring it a valuable medicine for that painful disease, and for no other is it recommended.

Certificates of important cures and directions for use accompanying each bottle. Price 50 cents.

LA MOTT'S COUGH DROPS.

VALUABLE MEDICINE FOR COUGHS AND CONSUMPTION

THIS Elixir, in its original form of prescription, has stood the test of twenty years experience, in the general use of it, and is now offered, with the addition of some articles from the vegetable kingdom the virtues which, have been fully attested and highly appreciated, which render this composition peculiarly adapted to the present prevailing disorders of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption. Common colds and coughs, which are occasioned by obstructed perspiration, will readily yield to its influence, removing those troublesome irritations, which act as a constant stimulant to coughing. It eases pain, and induces rest to an eminent degree. Persons afflicted with pulmonary complaints, bleeding of the longs, &c., spasmodic asthma, palpitation of the heart, and consumptive affections, even in the most advanced periods of life, will find immediate relief, from its remarkable power of diminishing irritability of the system; and the velocity of the circulation, and by cleansing and healing the disordered parts. It also affords immediate relief in the hooping cough.

☞Be particular that each bottle has those letters stamped on it: LA MOTT'S COUGH DROPS, PREPARED BY O. THE undersigned take this method of informing travellers, and the public generally, that they have commenced running a DAILY LINE OF POST COACHES, between MEREDOSIA and JACKSONVILLE, leaving Meredosia every day at 8 o'clock, A. M. and leaving Jacksonville every day at 1 P. M.

THROUGH IN TWO AND A HALF HOURS!

Meredosia is the nearest point on the Illinois river to Jacksonville, and is designated as the crossing place of the great Western Railroad to the Mississippi. From Jacksonville, there are regular lines of four-horse stages twice a week, through Beardstown, Rushville, Mount Sterling, Clayton and Columbus, to Quincy; three times a week through Springfield, Tremont and Peoria, to Galena, Ottawa and Chicago; also through Springfield to Terre Haute; also through Springfield to either Vandalia or St. Louis; three times a week from Jacksonville to St. Louis, direct, via Manchester, White Hall, Carrollton, Jerseyville, and Alton, through in 36 hours; and twice a week direct through Hillsborough and Vandalia, intersecting the Vincennes and St. Louis line at Salem. By this it will be seen that the facilities for the conveyance of travellers from Meredosia, through Jacksonville, to all the other important towns in the State, are unsurpassed by any other point on the river.

The proprietors have a comfortable two-horse carriage for the conveyance of passengers to any place that may be desired.

They have also a large and commodious

PUBLIC HOUSE,

Just above the steamboat landing, where they will be happy to provide travellers and others with the best the country affords, and on as good terms.

As one of the firm will devote the whole of his attention to the conveyance of passengers, and the other to the wants and comfort of their guests, they feel confident in being able to give, as they intend to deserve, universal satisfaction.

☞They have an empty private house, with several apartments, comfortably fitted up, for the accommodation of families who may wish to remain in Meredosia a few days till they can make arrangements for their ultimate residence or location.

Thankful for the very liberal patronage they have heretofore received, they respectfully solicit a continuance.

J. H. & G. W. FINCH, Proprietors.

JACKSONVILLE HOTEL.

THE subscriber would beg leave to inform the public, that he has taken the TAVERN HOUSE lately occupied by

Maj. Wm. Miller, and known as the JACKSONVILLE HOTEL, situated on the west side of the Public Square and corner of State Street, in the town of Jacksonville; where he hopes from the situation of the house, its size, and convenience to the business part of the town, to be able to accommodate all who may be pleased to favor him with their custom.

He has also (in connexion with the house) large and convenient stabling, for the accommodation of travellers horses, to which department every attention shall be given by an honest and attentive ostler. WM. C. SCOTT.

Jacksonville, October 12, 1837.—3m.—20

MANSION HOUSE,

And General Stage Office,

State Street, West of the Public Square, Jacksonville,

THE subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he has resumed the above establishment, and would inform his friends, and patrons heretofore, that he would be pleased to welcome them once more to his house. Having furnished the above establishment entirely new, and having it now undergoing thorough repair, he flatters himself that he will be able to render general satisfaction to those pleased to give him a call. J. HESLEP.

Jacksonville, October 19, 1837.—3w.—21.

NAPLES FERRY.

TRAVELLERS, and the public generally, are respectfully informed that the Horse Ferry Boat at Naples is now in operation, under the superintendence of a competent and careful ferryman, and they may rest assured that no labor or pains will be spared to give the most perfect satisfaction. The boat is new and substantial, and may be considered as safe as it possibly can be made. Naples is the nearest and best route from Jacksonvile to Quincy, and travellers will find as good accommodations on this road as on any other in the State. The terms of Ferriage are as low as at any other ferry on the Illinois river—A share of the travelling custom is respectfully solicited.
